PROHIBITION BILL BELGIAN KING AND BACK TO SENATE QUEEN AT CAPITOL

CONGRESS HAVING REPASSED PROHIBITION BILL OVER THE VETO IT IS NOW IN SENATE

By the Associated Press
WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—(Flash)
Senate passes prohibition enforcement over president's veto.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—An effort to have the senate act on a motion to repass the prohibition enforcement bill over President Wilson's veto was made soon after the senate convened today. Several Democrats objected and a long parliamentary dispute over the rules followed.

When the bill was received from the house, Senator Sterling, Republican of S. D., who had charge of the measure when it passed the senate, requested unanimous consent for immediate consideration. Senator Robinson, Democrat of Arkansas, objected and then Senator Sterling moved that the senate which was in open executive session for debate on the peace treaty proceed to legislative business.

Objection to laying aside the treaty was made by Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, the administration leader, who has opposed prohibition measures in the past, although Senator Sterling said he was sure the bill's disposition would require but a short time.

The prohibition debate was still in progress when the senate recessed to formally receive King Albert of Belgium.

WILL LABOR CONFERENCE FEED FOREIGN DELEGATES?

By the Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—The committee on organization of the International Labor Conference which opens here tomorrow will take up the question of feeding German and Austrian delegates who are now on their way here. The committee also determined to recommend to the conference that delegates from all allied and neutral countries be recognized regardless of the powers they represent provided the powers have ratified the peace treaty under which the conference will be held.

BAD WEATHER BRINGS AID TO BOLSHEVIK

By the Associated Press

LONDON, Oct. 28.—The winter season moving southward from the arctic regions is coming to the aid of Bolshevik troops in Petrograd and the ability of General Udenitch to capture the former Russian capital before cold weather puts an end to his campaign seems doubtful.

Soviet forces fighting desperately against the northwestern Russian army have succeeded in recapturing Psarskoe-Selo and Pavlovsk south of Petrograd and appear to be in a position to continue the defense of the city for an indefinite period.

Furious fighting is going on in and around Kiev which was taken last week by General Denekine's forces.

Lettish troops below Riga have maintained their control of the right bank of the Duna river.

KAISER DISDAINED WILSON PEACE HELP

DID "NOT CARE ABOUT IT," TELEGRAM READ AT THE BERLIN INVESTIGATION SHOWS.

By the Associated Press

BERLIN, Oct. 23.—President Wilson's peace offer was a matter of little concern to the German emperor, according to evidence presented today before the National Assembly sub-committee investigating the war. Intervention by the United States apparently was not seriously considered by him.

This development caused a sensation and came in the examination of Count von Bernstorff, the former Ambassador at Washington. The Socialist Deputy, Dr. Sinsheimer, turned toward von Bernstorff, and said:

"The Kaiser's telegram, to which you refer, dated Jan. 16, (1917), and addressed to Herr Zimmermann, (Foreign Secretary,) says literally: 'His Majesty instructs me to thank you for your communication. His Majesty does not care about President Wilson's offer. If a breach with America cannot be prevented, it cannot be helped. Events are developing."

There was much excitement at the hearing when the message was read. Dr. Karl Hefferich, the former Vice Chancellor, whispered "Nonsense."

Dr. Sinsheimer maintained that the peace conditions sent to President Wilson on Jan. 28, 1917, which were said to be the same as those Germany offered on Dec. 13, 1916, were really nothing like them. Every one present appeared astounded at this statement, and Count von Bernstorff exclaimed, excitedly:

"Then I am told this today for the first time!"

Under cross examination, von Bernstorff quoted the emperor and General Ludendorff on his return from Washington. The emperor said that von Bernstorff had failed on two points, first, in allowing the British to confiscate the trunk with a Swedish diplomat's papers thought to contain his Mexican telegrams, and second, by permitting the United States to send James W. Gerard to Germany as ambassador.

Ludendorff accused him of attempting to make peace by agitating against the submarine war and declared that the U-Boat war would bring peace in three months. He then told the former Ambassador that President Wilson's peace proposal could not pass the Reichstag, and that it would be championed only by the Socialists, adding that a "rotten peace" was impossible.

The question of Poland's fate in connection with President Wilson's peace efforts was discussed at the session. Count von Bernstorff said that in his discussions with the United States government there was no question of territory concerning giving Poland access to the sea or being withdrawn from German sovereignty. Replying to another question, he said:

"Without America's help the Entente could not have vanquished Germany. If we had succeeded in preventing war with America a peace of understanding would at least have been possible."

Von Bernstorff also expressed the opinion that President Wilson would have raised no difficulties had the proposed world conference to settle peace solved the Polish question in a manner different from President Wilson's ideas.

The discussion today turned largely upon the period of the declaration by Germany of her ruthless submarine warfare. Von Bernstorff testified that after President Wilson's message to congress on Jan. 22, Col. E. M. House, the President's confidential adviser, summoned him to New York and thereupon von Bernstorff cabled his government saying that the United States did not intend to interfere in territorial

A Murder Case With a Strange Tale Attached

LIVERPOOL.—"I had a dream in which I saw my dead mother, grandmother and God. They told me if I went into the street and saw a desperate burglar I was to shoot him and I would go to heaven."

"I thought he was a desperate burglar and I shot him. This was very much to my regret."

With these words Harry Theman, chief engineer of the American steamer Victorious, calmly "explained" his murder of Samuel Emmett, a dock laborer, whom he had never seen before. A verdict of wilful murder was returned at the inquest held here.

The coroner read a statement which Theman wrote while in a cell at the Bridewell, in which he said:

"I wish to give an account of the shooting. Leaving the saloon after supper about 6 p. m., with the first assistant engineer, I thought I heard music across the basin. God was standing about fifteen feet from the ship. He said I would have to die as I was wicked and cruel, and the devil would get me. I had not seen my father for three years, and my father called me."

"I begged for mercy, and His face softened, and He said all who repented should have mercy. I begged forgiveness for my sins and was told I should enter heaven. I was told by a female to go to sleep, which I did.

"As I did so I seemed to slip down, a center of attraction for everybody. A huge multitude was there. I was put through a large number of 'attractions' which were tests for my courage, such as a den of beasts, a large wagon falling on me, and all kinds of other things. I had to say 'Amen' and make the face of God in my mind, and at the last minute I got by the dangers."

"Finally I was led into a large music hall, where much dancing was going on. There was music, and this kept up until 7:30 a. m.

"After breakfast I heard a terrible pounding on the decks and a voice at my side, that was my friend, seemed to put all the advice in my ear. There were two different factions, and the one I was with was the leading."

"The first test I had to do was to get a spirit in a room, and I had to stare at the mast steadily, which I tried, but could not. I was then told I could not get back to heaven, but was eventually given another chance. Then my friend said I would have to shoot a bad burglar. I tried to argue but he won out. If I did not I would die instantly, as I was half mortal and half man."

"I went to the place stated and started to avoid it. But he said I would not make heaven and would die instantly. When he said the word I shot the man. This was very much to my regret. The case is a great misfortune to me."

too great a burden for any one man to bear for more than a few years, and Woodrow Wilson has broken under the strain, William Allen White told members of the Athenaeum Club here recently.

"President Wilson is not fatally ill," said Mr. White, "but as a result not only of his tour of the United States, but of his arduous labors at Paris, his physical and spiritual strength has been greatly diminished.

"The poor man at Washington today is Icarus lying beneath a wrecked machine, little hoping to fly again, but hoping to see others fly. President Wilson at Paris had my sympathy. He did not impress me as Jack the Giant Killer, but rather as Prometheus chained to the rock while the vultures preyed upon his vitals. He had to go alone amidst the play of great forces."

"The League of Nations covenant is only 70 per cent perfect; sometimes I think it is much less than that, but it is the big thing of the Peace Conference, the most significant thing west of the Ganges since the crucifixion, and it is all Wilson's work. If it were only 10 percent perfect, it would still be a step in the right direction."

An early ratification of the covenant by the Senate was predicted by Mr. White.

Mrs. Chaplin is shown here with the queen to whom she has just presented a huge bouquet of orchids. The Chaplins offered their airplanes for their short stay in Los Angeles and this picture was taken on the Chaplin aviation field. Mildred Harris Chaplin's press agent claims that although every other star tried for the honor of meeting the queen, that little Mrs. Chaplin was the only one to succeed.

New York Yankees Will Keep Miller Huggins Another Year

By N. E. BROWN.

When New York fans, along in the latter part of the 1919 baseball campaign, realized that they weren't going to get a pennant—that both of the flags were going to teams "in the provinces," they showed their poor sportsmanship by looking around for a goat.

They picked Huggins, the pilot of the Yankees.

They blamed Huggins for everything, even to the wormy peanuts that were found in the bags now and then.

"We'd have had a pennant in a walk with a decent manager," was their whine. "Let's get a good one."

But evidently the men who were paying Miller Huggins a goodly salary to fill their coffers with gold pieces were watching Huggins a little bit closer than were the fans, and they have shown their faith in the little gent by signing him up for next season.

Huggins deserves another chance. The Yankees finished third in a redhot campaign—nothing for any team to be ashamed of.

One thing over which Hug had no control played the most important part in the team's failure to finish higher. That was the inability of Ernie Shore, former Red Sox star, to deliver the goods. When the Yank owners obtained Lewis and Shore from the Sox last winter Huggins was satisfied. So was everyone else except the Red Sox fans. But Shore, out of baseball a year while serving in the navy, failed to regain his real form. This and the illness of Thormahlen forced Huggins to overwork Quinn and Shawkey and they broke under the strain.

When Huggins saw how things were going he urged the Yankee owners to land him a good hurler. He knew that Carl Mays was on the market. The Yank owners went after the submarine hurler, but got him just too late. Mays' pitching put the Yankees into the running when they apparently were shot. But Mays alone couldn't pitch them to the top.

In addition to these unfortunate circumstances the fact stands out that the Yankees were guilty of boneheaded playing that could not be laid on Huggins' doorstep. The vets were as guilty as were the youngsters. You can lead a player to the game, but you can't make him think.

Huggins himself is optimistic about next season. The fact that Frank Baker may retire (again) doesn't worry him. Hug believes that Chick Fewster is ripe for the third base job. He also believes that another youngster named Gleich will be able to play the outfield acceptably if Duffy Lewis decides to quit the game.

Mrs Parks Feared End Was Near But Takes Tanlac And Health Is Restored

"I actually believe Tanlac saved my life, for it pulled me up when I was nearly past going," said Mrs. Laura Parks, of 1432 N. Calhoun street, Fort Worth, Tex.

"My condition was such," she continued, "that everything I would eat caused gas to rise and press on my heart till I thought I would smother to death. After eating I would become nauseated and would get so dizzy I was afraid of falling; my limbs would become numb, then again they would tingle all over like thousands of needles sticking in me. I was so nervous that I could hardly sleep, had sick headaches most all the time and was so miserable and despondent I feared my end was near.

Soon after taking Tanlac my appetite picked up, my digestion improved and I got to eating everything I wanted. I am now strong enough to do all my housework and more, all my troubles are over. I sleep like a child and my husband tells me I am the very picture of health."

WHISKEY IN WAREHOUSES IS NOW BEING WITHDRAWN

By News' Special Service

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 28.—Bonded whiskey in warehouses in this and adjacent districts is gradually being withdrawn and sent to other parts of the country in preparation for the repeal of wartime prohibition, it has been learned here. Chief Deputy U. S. Internal Revenue Collector Stephen W. McGrath has disclosed that owners of the whiskey in the Cincinnati district have made frequent visits to his office to secure permission for the transfer of the liquor. Thousands of gallons have been moved out, and most of it sent to the big warehouses in the neighborhood of the big centers in the East.

What transpired in the Ohio warehouses has been repeated in Kentucky it is said. Distillers look forward to the lifting of the ban between November 15 and December 1, it is said.

Collective Bargaining

The particular stumbling block in the path of the industrial conference at the moment is "collective bargaining." Several resolutions have been drawn up covering this question, but in a general way both the employers and labor stand where they have always stood and both are refusing to budge.

"Collective bargaining" is a question that will bear considerable analysis. It happens that the bargaining is over something that is not a commodity. Labor unions have fought hard against having labor regarded as a commodity and they are perfectly right. Labor is not a commodity for the obvious reason that it cannot be divorced from the human being who produced it. Now a human being has certain inalienable rights—such as freedom of action in more human relationships. This applies to employers as well as labor, and labor has no just claim to more freedom in this matter of bargaining than employers.

Now, a man has as much right to bargain collectively as he has to bargain individually. Conversely, a man has as much right to bargain individually as he has to act in co-operation with his fellows. And when we speak of collective bargaining we must assume that the workers agree to the process in which they are represented by union officials. Obviously union officials should not force individual workers to accept any bargain made against their desires. The collective bargaining, on the workers' side, should either be inclusive or those excluded from it should be granted all the rights enjoyed by the collectivists, whether they are a majority or a minority.

The question of collective bargaining as raised by the opposing groups in the conference goes back to that more fundamental question—the closed shop. It is not collective bargaining that is so bitterly opposed by employers but the closed shop, which is implied in the labor group's program. The situation in the steel strike illustrates both sides of the matter. Mr. Gompers told the conference that the A.F. of L. sanctioned the steel strike to retain leadership of the men. He declared that if the Federation had not sanctioned the strike it would have been called anyway, by the radical agitators. He wants the steel strikers recognized.

Suppose the A. F. of L. had not led this strike; had, in fact, opposed it. Suppose, further, that it has been called by radicals without support from the American Federation of Labor. Would Mr. Gompers deny the right of Judge Gary of the steel corporation either to recognize or refuse to recognize the leaders in such a case? If employers are bound to recognize any authorized representatives of their workers they must recognize all such authorized representatives. In other words, all workers must be put on the same footing whether they are members of a union or not, and the closed shop becomes an impossibility except in cases where all the workers in a given industry or shop join the same union.

We find, therefore, that in this matter of "rights" employers and workers are on equally firm ground. In relation to "collective bargaining" they have equal rights as to selling and buying or refraining from either. There is no question about such rights in other kinds of bargaining and the mutual advantages to be secured by bargaining lead to the facilitating of the process. It is the business of the industrial conference to find expedients to facilitate this process in the industrial field, and it can best be done by recognizing the "rights" of all parties concerned and putting the whole matter on a different and higher plane. This, of course, cannot be done until both employers and labor men mutually agree to abandon the old tactics and recast their formulas. It was for this larger purpose that the industrial conference was called. Unless this is brought about no real progress is possible, and there is danger in a patched up agreement for the simple reason that it will further split organized labor and give impetus to radical movements within labor circles.

PRESIDENT WILSON IS RIGHT

President Wilson has vetoed the prohibition enforcement law. Now the uninformed and misinformed will denounce him as he has never been denounced before. The professional prohibitionist—the self-elected censors of public morals—will appeal to high heaven for vengeance on the man who has temporarily killed a favorite measure.

But the president is right. It is one thing for a majority to vote liquor out of a state. It is another thing to vitiate the constitution and ignore the fundamentals of liberty in order to enforce a law that has never received the sanction of a public majority.

Prohibition is right. It is for the best interests of mankind. We are for prohibition, county-wide, state-wide, nation-wide, world-wide. But it should be adopted by the people and not by politicians. And when it is once adopted it should be enforced according to law and not according to fanaticism. The constitution and bill of rights should be observed in preparing statutes for prohibition enforcement. When both constitution and bill of rights are trampled under foot by a congress that lacks sufficient moral courage to preserve the liberties of the country, it is high time for the president of all the people to interfere.

The ideals of Americans are not trivial things. They cost the lives of some of the bravest men that ever marched to battle. The story of their origin is glorified by the eloquence of Otis opposing the writs of assistance. "That a man's house in his castle" became one of the slogans of the revolutionary uprising. Men died to save the colonists from some of the impositions incorporated in this bill just slain by presidential veto. It was the deathless hope of saving freemen from these identical tyrannies that inspired the patriots of Valley Forge. But the story of constitutional life is forgotten by a congress poisoned by the office lust, and the safe-guards won by centuries of suffering are permitted to stand as naught in the way.

Last December we saw federal marshals searching the baggage of every passenger on an Oklahoma train. We saw the intimate wearing apparel of a young lady scattered along the aisle of the coach by armed men searching for hidden liquor. That woman was a Red Cross nurse returning from a year's service at a northern cantonment. No explanation of hers would be accepted. If she had been a coke-head from Twenty-Second and Wabash she would have received no more contemptuous treatment from these so-called officers of the law. And this dragooning that Eastern Oklahoma has been subjected to for fifty years was to be extended over the entire United States by the bill just vetoed by President Wilson.

Any defense of Wilson will be branded as treason by the radical. But Wilson is right, nevertheless. Two of the greatest enemies this nation ever had are the liquor man who violates every law of God and man to carry on his traffic, and the professional agitator who would stab the constitution to death in order to suppress that traffic. Either would willingly destroy the nation if necessary in order to carry a point. It is against such enemies as these that the nation needs protection.

In itself the prohibition question is settled. It is now a part of our national life just as much as the single standard and the income tax. Liquor traffic, like the slave, is damning in its essence and had to die. It is dead. But in keeping its bones beneath the sod no congress and no party should be permitted to destroy the very principles upon which the nation is based and from which we derive our freedom. President Wilson did right.

Prince Freeling, the oratorical Prince Rupert of Oklahoma politics, got eloquent over Tulsaway the other night and said that any policeman who joins a union should be shot at sunrise. Prince is plumb crazy. There is not a gunman in our entire acquaintance that would get up at sunrise to shoot a policeman or any other varmint. Then Prince ought to know there is a blooming lot of difference between being shot and being half-shot.

J. Ham Lewis said at Tulsa the other night that J. Ardmore Reed is a man equal in ability to any man in public life. And J. Ham is not the first man to note the decadence of our public servants.

The Queen of Belgium was presented to the senate today. "God save the queen."

Miami News: Government of the people, by rag-chewing, for applause

Konawa Chief Leader: Editors and preachers are presumed to be the most holy men on earth. And incidentally, their pay is the most ungodly.

Healdton Herald: Our forefathers used to talk about justice being tempered with mercy, but in this day and age it seems to be fast turning around to the place where most of the tempering is done with money.

Shawnee News: And Judge Harrell would make the league of nations, upon which he would not vote, an issue in his race for congress. But it is hardly likely that he had ever thought about the matter in that light. He simply had to have an issue and he didn't care a whoop what it was so long as it was the very opposite to what Weaver stood for.

Marlow Review: That Beatty-Walton-Burns-Donnelly - Patterson, etc., fight in Oklahoma City looks like the fellow at a distance like a juvenile yet malicious contention among men too little for their jobs. It gives the wrong impression to the outsider if they take the time to read this trash in the daily papers. Oklahoma's citizenship is of a much higher order than this silly twaddle over trifles would indicate.

Okeham Ledger: A Tulsa bootlegger called for a number over the phone to talk to a prospective customer. The girl at central gave him the wrong number and he told a strong W. C. T. U. worker that he could furnish her with something good. The lady made arrangements to meet the peddler of joy water, but took along the sheriff and a couple of deputies. Result, one bootlegger, four quarts of good whiskey and an automobile were taken in.

Cleveland American: The indications are that since the Fall and Shantung amendments have been voted down that the league of nations and covenant will be ratified. Congress has spent six months of valuable time in the discussion of foreign questions and has given but little attention to domestic legislation that has been urgent. It is thought the extra session will adjourn in a few days to give the law makers a little vacation before the convening of the regular session in December.

Pittsburg County Guardian: Frankly, we would like to see the government keep its finger out of the coal mine strike. Let these issues be threshed out by the public. We can't help but believe that one of the flies in the ointment of industrial life today is the initial endeavor of the government to come in and adjust private differences, no matter how well-intentioned that effort may have been. Keep these issues clear of politics, and the parties affected directly will work out a more satisfactory solution.

Muskogee Times Democrat: Governor Harding of Iowa announces that if the coal miners strike and tie up the mines he will exercise the necessary power vested in him to see that the coal is mined. He does not propose to see his people suffer from cold simply because the miners and operators cannot agree. Governor Hardings statement sounds a good deal like the doctrine of Ole Hanson. And, why should the people of Iowa suffer simply because of a disagreement between two small elements of citizens?

Ada Playhouses

At the American

Monroe Salisbury is seen tonight in a Universal Special attraction called "Sundown Trail", at the American Theatre.

This is one of those splendid western pictures that are always interesting to everyone and the plot is laid in the gold fields of California as they were in the days of 1849.

It is very romantic and thrilling and gripping, and awe-inspiring and everything, and you will like it just fine.

At the Liberty

All this week, with a complete change of program each day. The Southern Beauties, perhaps the best attraction of the vaudeville season, will be seen at the Liberty Theater matinee and night.

With this singing, dancing, beauty chorus attraction is numbered a splendid quartet, a good acrobatic dancer, a good "Blues" singer and a splendid picture program.

Tonight on the screen Viola Diana will be seen in "Satan, Jr." which is worth the price of the show.

The vaudeville patrons of this popular playhouse will be delighted with the "Southern Beauties".

MILLION MEMBERS STATE'S GOAL IN RED CROSS DRIVE

OWENS EXPECTS WAR TIME MEMBERSHIP MARK TO BE BEATEN IN COMING DRIVE NOV. 2-11

Oklahoma City.—In the coming Red Cross roll call membership campaign, November 2-11, Oklahoma's quota will be 1,001,200, according to an announcement by J. F. Owens, state director for the campaign.

"This is about what our quota was last year and we oversubscribed it," Mr. Owens said today. "So we should do much better this year for we expect to not only re-enroll all the members we obtained last year, but to obtain many more."

Appeal in Peace Program

"The peace time program of the Red Cross gives us an opportunity to make a strong appeal for members this year. A big part of the Red Cross work in Oklahoma will be in combating disease and bettering the health conditions. Just how important this work is in Oklahoma can be realized when it is known that last year needless deaths and needless expenditures for medicine and doctor bills totalled $3,000,000 in this state."

"In order to get our quota in Oklahoma, it is absolutely necessary first, that the people understand the necessity of this campaign. The thing we have to fear is the people will take the attitude that the war is over and that they want nothing to do with anything that was connected with the war. We must realize however that the work of the Red Cross has just begun and that it is important not only to the state, but to every community in the state that the work be carried on."

Must Care for Service Men

"First of all, the Red Cross must be able to take care of the wounded and disabled soldiers in the hospitals. Thousands of men still are in hospitals abroad and in camps awaiting discharge. The Red Cross must take care of these men until the last one is home."

"The Red Cross still has obligations to foreign countries that must be met. Red Cross relief commissions have begun work abroad that must be finished. The safety of America hinges on the checking of disease and Bolshevikism abroad."

"But paramount this is a campaign for our home communities. Our eyes have been turned abroad and we have been engrossed in the helping of stricken in foreign countries, who were unable to help themselves. In doing this, perhaps we have neglected the folks at our own front door. Now we must get back to them."

Welfare Depends on Health

"Public welfare depends upon public health. Health conditions revealed by the draft, an alarming infantile mortality, the terrible toll from the influenza scourge—all these things point to the growing need of health knowledge."

"People have realized the value of Red Cross home service because of its activities have reached communities where no other social agency is at work. The coming campaign will enable the Red Cross to carry its home service work to further ends."

"One of the best reasons for the maintenance of Red Cross is that it provides an agency for quick relief in times of disaster. Just as the Marines are the first to fight, so is the Red Cross first to help."

"The present high state of organization and efficiency to be found in the Red Cross is illustrated by the prompt relief measures taken when the recent storm swept the country. The first train into Corpus Christi following the storm was a Red Cross train, which carried supplies and workers to relieve the suffering of the stricken people. As an illustration of the promptness with which the Red Cross acts, when Alfred Fairbank, manager of the Southwestern division of the American Red Cross, was in Oklahoma City, he was handed a noon edition of a newspaper telling of the tornado that struck Hoxsington, Kansas, causing loss of life, and much property damage. Mr. Fairbank immediately wired the Red Cross chapter chairman of Hoxsington, placing all the resources of the Red Cross at his command for the relief of the storm sufferers."

Aims of Red Cross

"Just briefly the aims of the Red Cross can be divided under five heads—nursing service, home service, first aid, junior memberships and service in foreign lands."

"Under the head of home service comes the caring of the families of soldiers and sailors, continued help to the service man, and family relief where there is no other agency in the community and disaster relief. In 90 per cent of the communities where home service has been at work, there is no other relief agency."

"The work of the Red Cross in first aid will include training in the prevention of accidents, when an accident does happen and the arousing of public opinion to safety first and prevention of disease."

AVIATION INSURANCE IS NEWEST PROBLEM

Flying has opened a new and puzzling field to the insurance companies. It has not yet attained sufficient proportions to warrant a table of averages similar to the American mortality table, upon which to base premium charges. And yet, with thousands of planes in the air and thousands of men engaged in this most modern and most hazardous form of transportation, there is an ever increasing demand for some form of policy.

A few companies have made tentative steps in the direction of aviation insurance. Some are writing a 1-year, non-renewable term life policies for professional fliers, and short term accident policies, similar to the travelers' policies sold at railway ticket offices, for passengers. These policies usually cover only one trip. Public liability and property damage insurance for aircraft, analogous to motor car public liability and property damage insurance, also is being written to a limited extent.

This insurance is valuable to the airplane owner or driver in that it protects him from damage claims arising from articles falling from his plane or from property destruction in bad landings. But the risk firms are compelled to establish their premium rates blindly. Aviation has not yet advanced far enough for them to be able to determine with any degree of scientific accuracy the liability of such accidents.

The entire field is fogged with

CONTRACT LET FOR SCHOOL BUILDING

A contract was let yesterday for the construction of the proposed school building for Consolidated District No. 1. The contract was let to Sam Hill of Ada, and calls for the expenditure of $26,250.00. There were a number of bids submitted.

The three districts of Latta, Elm Flat and Knox recently voted to consolidate and establish an up-to-date high school in their midst. Bonds in the sum of $25,000 were voted to erect a centrally located building and this sum is supplemented by a sum of several thousand dollars available from the state.

The contract let yesterday calls for a building of brick, containing eleven rooms including the auditorium. Work is to begin immediately and the building finished as soon as possible. The people of the new district are enthusiastic over the prospect of having a high school equal to any in the country.

RUSSIAN PEOPLE ARE DRIVEN SOUTH

By the Associated Press

BELGRADE, Sept. 24.—There has been a constantly increasing exodus of refugees from Southern Russia during the past four months. Driven from their homes by the disorder and unrest there, these unhappy people have wandered into Rumania and Serbia, where the problem of handling their own people is already enormous. About fifteen per cent of the appeals received by the American Red Cross at Belgrade during the past month have been behalf of Russians.

The Serbians have been very kind to these visitors. The newspapers and billboards are filled with appeals for "Brother Russians" and for the "Children of Serbia's Ally." Yet the Serbians have little to give, and the problem of caring for a great influx of outsiders is a serious one.

Many of these South Russians are people of considerable means who have brought with them large quantities of local currency of the provinces from which they come. But their rubles are of small value in the eyes of the money changers of the Balkan towns and the plight of the "ruble-millionaire" is little better than that of the penniless refugee. The majority have been passed on to look for work in the farming districts. Two thousand flocked to Belgrade.

American Red Cross units in all parts of the Balkans report similar influxes of South Russians. A large amount of clothing has also been distributed to them at Saloniki and at Athens. There are 5,000 of them in the latter city. About 20,000 Russians have entered Rumania.

The Balkan governments hope to find some way of stemming this exodus from Russia during the next few weeks, and even to repatriate a large number as soon as the restoration of normal conditions in the Odessa district makes such a step possible.

Easier Now Than Later.

It is easier to break up a cold or check a cough now than it will be later. Persistent bronchial coughs that "hang on" all winter pave the way for serious throat and lung diseases. L. W. Day, 66 Campbell Av., E., Detroit, Mich., writes: "Foley's Honey and Tar relieves one of bronchitis very quickly. I hope never to have it again." This reliable family medicine for the relief of coughs, colds, croup, hoarseness, etc., contains no opiates. Children like it. Sold everywhere. adv.

Happy Felsch Is Holder of Field Record For Outs

By the Associated Press

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—Oscar "Happy" Felsch, who plays center field for the White Sox against the Cincinnati Reds, is the holder of a new record for major league center fielders. On June 20, 1919, while the White Sox were playing Cleveland, "Happy" accepted twelve chances without a slip. Eleven of his chances were flies and one an assist.

Jimmy Slagle, while playing right field for the Chicago Nationals, in 1897, made twelve put-outs and this is the record for all outfielders, as far as put-outs are concerned.

In 1877, Schafer, who played right field for the Braves, had seven put-outs and four assists and Hornung, left fielder for the same club, gathered ten put-outs and one assist in 1881. O'Brien of the old Metropolitan, had eleven put-outs in 1887, but made an error. Dick Hartley of the Cardinals, in 1918, had eleven put-outs and Topsy Hartsel, while with the Cubs in 1906, grabbed off the same number.

Eighty dollars for baseballs for each game played in the World's series!

That sounds big, but nevertheless, that is approximately what it will cost to furnish the principal item for the baseball classic this year.

As in other things, the high cost has hit baseballs, which now bring $20 a dozen. It is estimated four dozen balls will be used in each game. On this basis, if it is decided to play nine games in the series, and it becomes necessary to run the entire string, before the winner is decided, it will cost close to $1,000 for balls alone.

The reason that so many are used is because balls fouled into the stands or crowd are seldom returned. During an ordinary game, however, most of the balls which leave the playing field, find their way back.

Manufacturers blame increased prices paid for materials and the high cost of labor for the present price.

Horsehide used in covering the baseballs has increased in cost during the past three years about 250 per cent. The wool yarn has jumped 200 per cent in three years. The official ball of the National League is made with a cork center. The price of this cork has doubled and a special thread used has increased almost three times. The cork center ball was patented August 31, 1909. It weighs five ounces and is nine inches in circumference. This ball will be used in all games played in the National League ball park during the series. Another ball, similarly made, and adopted by the American League, will be used in all contests in the junior league park.

Airplane Will Report South Pole Exploration

By the Associated Press

LONDON, Oct. 3.—An airplane, hovering about the South Pole, may send back to London daily wireless advices relative to explorations or scientific researches by the South Pole expedition which is to be led by John L. Cope next summer.

The explorer, who has served as a surgeon and biologist on previous south polar expeditions, believes the use of airplanes and wireless in probing the solitudes of the icebound antarctic regions will lead to revelations that will make the trip more important, from a scientific point of view, than any previous explorations of the earth's "under side."

Although new difficulties will be created by the use of aircraft it is claimed the advantages to be obtained are so great as to be obvious to anyone acquainted with such research. It is proposed to equip the airplanes with wireless apparatus having a sending range of several hundred miles ensuring communication with the "mother ship" of the expedition. From this ship summaries of the airplanes' exploits are to be flashed by more powerful instruments back to the civilized world.

STATE RECEIVES MORE ARMY TRUCKS

By News' Special Service

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 2.—Max L. Cunningham, state highway engineer, has returned from Washington where he went to appear before the military committees in congress to ask for additional government trucks for federal aid highway projects. Oklahoma originally was allotted 184 three and four ton trucks and more than 100 of these have been received by the highway department, the last shipment containing 74 Ford and Nash three ton, four wheel drive, trucks that have been run a very short distance.

Cunningham said that he secured the promise of the release of additional trucks to make the total number delivered to the state at this time 174 and that he was able to secure considerable encouragement that additional ones would be sent to Oklahoma.

The 74 trucks received from Fort Harrison last week have been unloaded at the statehouse. They will be carefully inspected and branded, tagged and equipped before being allotted to counties in which federal-aid highway work is in progress.

CONFIDENCE MEN WORKING LONDON

By the Associated Press

LONDON, Sept. 29.—Confidence men here have a newer game of victimizing credulous persons. Dressed in an army officer's uniform these tricksters produce papers purporting to show that they are entitled to a monthly allowance payable the following day and offer to sell the paper at a reduced figure.

A desire to render a service man some return has led many persons to exchange $75 or $100 for one of these worthless allowances according to police reports. Public hearings have resulted.

Better Feeling Advocated By Harvester Head

By the Associated Press

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 2.—The expressed desire of labor to share in the management of business was declared today by Cyrus McCormick Jr., works manager of the International Harvester company, to be in his opinion "the most significant feature in labor conditions of the day." Mr. McCormick was speaking before the National Safety Council on "Co-operation and Industrial Progress."

Pointing out that this desire had taken various forms in various parts of the world, Bolshevik in Russia, strikes in Central Europe, recourse to the "Whitley Plan" in England and clamor for the nationalization of industry, the harvester head continued:

"The underlying significance of all of these movements is the final realization that the relations of employers and employees must from now on be formed on something besides a cash basis. The workman is as interested as ever in his wages and in his hours, but he is asking for more. Sometimes the demands are not well understood even by those putting them forward. What the workman really wants is self-expression. They are asking the right to discuss and adjust matters affecting their own interests."

"Many employers in this country, sensing this situation are admitting the right of their employers to discuss in joint conference, matters affecting the joint interests of capital and labor. This, of course, has involved the recognition of the principle of collective bargaining."

Just as the doctrine of "caveat emptor" has vanished from business, so now is vanishing the fear of collective bargaining. Mr. McCormick said, and "we find ourselves not only permitting the right of workers to participate in the determination of working conditions but also discussing how this right may be most surely exercised." The method finding most favor in this country he termed "Employee Representation," and its consideration by American employers he ascribed to four general reasons: (1) Fear of Bolshevism and consequent anarchy; (2) democratization of industry; (3) a desire to introduce "moral right" into industry; and (4) because it will eventually prove most efficient and economical.

Until recent years the American industrial system was a "benevolent despotism," he asserted, with the large employers instituting systems of insurance, workmen's compensation and welfare work, but "everything that was done was imposed from the top and did not come as a result of the expressed desire of the great body of the employees." This was benevolent, he conceded, but also to a great extent despotic. "Now the employee is not only given the right, but is urged to accept it, to sit on an equal basis with his employer and decide every question which affects his interests," said the speaker.

He described what he conceived to be the fundamental principles underlying any plan of employee representation and told how successful the plan had been at the International Harvester Company plants where it is in effect.

Through it "Capital and labor are finding a very pleasant mutual understanding of each other's problems," he said, and the gap left by the growth of industry which destroyed the personal contact between employer and employee is being bridged. "The workings of the plan have called upon the representatives of the men and the management alike, to put forward their keenest intelligence," Mr. McCormick said, and the International Harvester Company has been able to discover many inequalities in the wage scale that it did not dream existed.

The American Federation of Labor has mistaken the trend of employee representation, he contended, and no one who sat through the meetings of a Works Council could believe any of the charges of the resolutions passed by the last A. F. L. convention "justifiable." They condemned the plan on the grounds of unfair election of representatives; that democratic organization was not permitted and that committee were intimidated. Mr. McCormick asserted it was not set up in opposition to organized labor and was not an endeavor to create company unions or do anything "to deprive the men of the results which long years of industrial history have secured for them."

"It is a sincere effort to bring capital and labor together for the benefit of each, and to develop between them a family feeling of mutual interest which cannot but be helpful to the development of industry today and tomorrow."

SCOTTISH CLANS CELEBRATE BRAEMAR

By the Associated Press

EDINBURGH, Scotland, Sept. 20.—The Braemar Highland Gathering, suspended for five years because of the war, was held this year on September 4 under the patronage of the king.

The Braemar is one of the oldest Scottish festivals, a games meeting where the national sports predominate.

The clansmen are Balmoral men, the Farquharsons, the Duffs, and the Forbes men from Strathdon. They are arrayed in their respective tartans, with plaid and broad bonnet, and carry their ancient Lochaber axes. With banners flying, to the skirt of the war pibroch and headed by their chiefs, their march around the arena of the Princess Royal Park is calculated to stir the enthusiasm of the spectators.

The gathering is over 300 years old, for it was founded by Malcolm Canmore.

fortune of getting forty-seven ducks. A prominent citizen of Ada counted ten thousand ducks on the marshes near Maud this morning, but his train was running too fast for him to count all the ducks in sight.

The attentiveness of the Red Cross to disabled soldiers was demonstrated here just recently when Mrs. Snead was informed that James M. Whelchel of Roff was suffering with appendicitis and needed an operation. She wired Dr. Holt of Houston, Tex., who is supervisor for this district, and her message was answered in less than two hours. Transportation was furnished and the young man was immediately sent to the government hospital at Alexandria, La., where he was operated on at once.

W. B. Jones returned this morning from Oklahoma City, and reports that there is much water along the Katy tracks in Little River bottom between Shawnee and Konawa. The track for several hundred yards was under water and the train made very slow time in crossing. At some places the water came up almost to the coaches. Mr. Jones admits that the sight of so much water was enough to make one think on his former ways.

Red flannel shirts were at a premium in Los Angeles when "Sundown Trail" was filmed at Universal City. The hundreds of extra men who appear in the production, which is at the American Theatre, exhausted the supply of the shirts and they had to cultivate the 1919 model of whiskers especially for the film drama. Monroe Salisbury is the star of "Sundown Trail," and Rollin S. Sturgeon was the director.

J. H. Hesterly of Fort Worth, Texas, representing the Invincible Oil Company, is in Ada looking over the oil and gas situation. This company, which operates in Oklahoma under the name of the Gladstone, is one of the strong companies in the Southwest, and the fact that it is keeping an eye on the Pontotoc county fields indicate that interest is not dead here but is actually increasing.

LIBERTY THEATER—COMMENCING NOVEMBER 3

UNION LABOR NOT ONLY CLASS THAT REQUIRES HIGHER WAGES

While union labor is demanding a constant advance in wages, and to a large extent this is connected with decreased efficiency and shorter hours, the great middle class of our people, comprising teachers, ministers, clerks and those of small fixed income based on former accumulations or inheritance, are suffering more than any other. For the latter there seems to be but little chance for a change for the better, since it is difficult to change fixed investments in a way which will yield a larger income and yet be thoroughly safe, to make up the difference between the present cost of living and former prices.

There are millions of people in this country, who through inheritances or small accumulations after long years of thrift, had a small income which was sufficient for their actual needs under the old conditions prior to the war, but who today find their incomes practically cut in half.

Teachers Get Beggarly Salaries

There are millions of others, including teachers and ministers, whose beggarly salaries are a disgrace to the country and clerks and others whose compensation has been in no way advanced in keeping with the higher cost of living.

It is a lamentable fact that the American people so little appreciate their responsibility to their own children and to the future of this country that the teachers continue on salaries small enough under former conditions, but which today are beggarly in comparison with the work which they are doing and the cost of living. Surely the people of this country do not fully recognize the fact that in doing this they are planting in the hearts of hundreds of thousands of teachers a feeling of injustice, and this feeling is justified by the conditions under which they labor. How is it possible for teachers to properly train children when they feel they are being robbed by the community, while the day laborer and the bricklayer, and the hodcarrier and the carpenter and all other labor is receiving steadily advancing wages? With such a feeling of injustice to them it is scarcely possible for these teachers not to become tainted with the socialistic and bolshevistic spirit of the hour and surely no teacher with that feeling in his heart can possibly do justice to the training of the children of this country upon whom its future must depend.

Every community which is failing to advance the salaries of teachers in proportion to the cost of living is guilty of an act of injustice for which it is impossible to atone.

Preachers Also Poorly Paid

Ministers of the gospel are suffering in the same way. If the salary of every minister in the country was overnight increased from 50 to 100 per cent they would still be receiving less than their dues. Today 99 per cent of them are working under conditions which leave such a narrow margin for caring for increased cost of living that their thought and time must of necessity be largely absorbed in these financial burdens, when they should be free from them in order to give their entire thought to the great work which they are seeking to do. The church which is underpaying its ministers is robbing him of that to which he has a right, and no church which is guilty of this form of robbery has any right to expect the blessing of the Almighty upon its work.

To a very large extent men and women in clerical positions have not received an increase in their salaries commensurate with the increased cost of living. It is true that a great many employers may not be able to do this, but wherever it is possible there should be an increase in keeping with the cost of living and the efficiency of the workers. It is probably a fact that the bank clerks of the country are more underpaid than any other class of clerical help in any business. These men are in positions of great responsibility, and yet a very large proportion of them are held down to salaries which must of necessity create a spirit of unrest and of unvoiced hostility to capital.

Army and navy officers never received salaries at all commensurate with the responsibility of their work.

Indeed, their salaries were always beggarly compared with their training and abilities, but now their pay, compared with the cost of living, is so small as to be unworthy of this great country. The same is true as to policemen and firemen.

These are some of the classes who are carrying the heaviest burden in the high cost of living. If we would be honest we must give larger pay to all these classes.

No man has a right to expect his children to be other than a failure whose teacher is not adequately competent.

No church member has a right to expect any moral or spiritual advancement in his own life, in his own church or his own community when his minister is inadequately compensated.

No business house has a right to expect prosperity when its clerks are not compensated as far as may be feasible in keeping with the advanced cost of living.

High Cost of Living to Stay

It must be borne in mind that the higher cost of living is a permanent thing. In vain do the politicians and some leading business men predict a material decline in the cost of living. It is not in sight. Mr. Herbert Hoover, wonderful man that he is, in a public meeting in Washington two years ago predicted a very great early decrease in the price of feedstuffs and therefore, a decrease in the price of meats. Mr. Hoover was asked publicly if he had taken into account certain conditions prevailing as to the shortage of crops in the preceding year which left a great vacuum to be filled. He said he had not, but that he was simply taking in to account the promise of a great corn crop of that year. The promise was not fulfilled. Even if the promise had been fulfilled, the surplus of that year would not have made up the vacuum of the preceding year.

President Wilson has stressed the profit-seeking of the day as the reason for the high cost of feedstuffs, refusing to press upon the public attention the tremendous increase in city population and the relative decrease in country population as the vital factor which will for a long time prevent any serious decline in the cost of foodstuffs, although he admitted the correctness of the figures given him.

It is folly to look forward to any great decrease in the cost of living. World inflation, which must continue for many years, decreasing food production in proportion to population, which cannot be overcome for many years, the just demand of farm labor and of all other manual workers for higher wages and a larger share of the profits of business than formerly will all tend to maintain a higher cost of living.

Moreover, it would be a world disaster should any attempt at deflation of currency be made or any serious deflation in the prices paid to the farmers. We must find a way to cut some of the wastage between the producer and the consumer, but unless for years to come the farmer gets as big a price as he has been getting, we will see a steady growth of the movement of population from the country, and therefore, a steady decline in production. Viewed from this standpoint, every business should adjust itself to the recognition of the permanency of the high cost of living, and especially should this be done as to the salaries of teachers, ministers and clerks, and all others who are not united in labor organizations, which by their constant threats and strikes are doing infinite harm, while the other classes are faithfully plodding away and doing their accustomed work under great disadvantages.—Manufacturers Record.

CELEBRATE BIRTH OF INCANDESCENT LIGHT

By the Associated Press

CHICAGO, Oct. 28.—The fortieth birthday of the incandescent electric light bulb was celebrated here last week when the delegates to the convention of the Illuminating Engineering Society of America met on a date especially arranged to coincide with the anniversary. Speakers recalled that the announcement by Thomas J. Edison, Oct. 21, 1879, that he had perfected an incandescent lamp that would really "light" was received with good-natured ridicule. But so rapid was the development of the invention and recognition of the accomplishment that on the following Christmas Eve an excursion train was run from New York to West Orange, N. J. carrying a throng to view the wonders of the first community lighted by electricity.

Declaring that the use of electricity for lighting is yet only in the first stages of development, the speakers pointed out that general use of the Edison invention has not come until the last ten or fifteen years and that up to that time kerosene and gasoline lamps and candles were widely used. But now even small communities have electric lighting plants and farm houses are lighted in a similar way while the application of electric power to practical uses has been widely extended.

MAGNIFICENT SETTINGS IN "VIRTUOUS MEN"

coin and directed by Ralph Ince, to be presented by the Liberty Theatre for the entertainment of their patrons, commencing Monday, Nov. 3, in the magnificence and massiveness of the sets. Ralph Ince devoted many weeks of consideration to this particular angle of the production. Many conferences between Messrs. Sawyer and Lubin and Ince were held prior to setting up of the battery of cameras used to photograph the S-L Picture. The scenario was gone over carefully for the purpose of outlining in advance the elaborate investiture of the production, together with the special construction of the many massive sets. Charles Chapman, an expert of many years' experience in matters of this nature, was specially engaged to supervise the building of these sets.

The preparation devoted to this end by the production by Ralph Ince and his associates has resulted, according to Manager McSweeney, in a film of tremendous size. Attention to minute details in the dressing of each set has given that touch which differentiates the average studio library or living room from those of the actual home. Mr. Chapman, with a special crew of scenic experts, carpenters, electricians and mechanics, erected library, drawing-room, office, ballroom, bedroom, hotel foyer and other sets which for magnificence have rarely been excelled. In order to carry out his ideas, he worked from faithful reproductions of the real thing, gathering from some of the finest residences in New York.

Try It 5 Cents Prove It EverywhereNEW SUBSTITUTE FOR PLATINUM AND GOLD

By the Associated Press

URBANA, Ill., Oct. 28.—A new metal alloy that can be substituted for platinum or gold where acid resisting metals are required, has been discovered by Prof. S. W. Parr of the department of chemistry of the University of Illinois. The new alloy, which Professor Parr has named "Illiun," in honor to the university, costs approximately 25 cents an ounce, whereas the cost of platinum recently was $140 an ounce and gold $40 an ounce.

The first mixture of Illium was made in April, 1917. This was not entirely satisfactory but early in the next year a fifty per cent standard of success was obtained. Now a piece of the metal has been kept in acid for six months while the acid has been made hot and cold, dilute and concentrated, and the metal has shown no sign of change.

Last year it was used with marked success in the calorimeter bombs used in measuring the heat units in coal which the government has ordered in large quantities now contain Illium instead of platinum.

Other alloys, it is said, have been found too brittle and can be cast but machined like Illium. "There has been a contest among chemists to discover a cheap alloy that would not corrode," Professor Parr said. "and big advances were made in this line during the war. Many chemical experiments require vessels which will stand up under acids and heretofore platinum and gold have been the only metals that would meet these requirements. Their purchase price has become prohibitive for experimental purposes, hence the efforts to find a substitute."

Report of Edmond Meeting.

A representative of the News asked Mrs. Tom Hope, past president of Ada State Federation of Women's Clubs, her impression of the Edmond convention. She replied in part as follows: "The biennial was one of the best, and perhaps the very best meeting our women have ever held. It was glorious to watch the happy faces of those two hundred and fifty members, from every part of Oklahoma, greeting each other with a bright smile and hand-clasp, while two years ago at Woodward they seemed only thoughtless. Everybody expressed joy that the war is over and the convention went on record as favoring the League of Nations and signed a petition to congress to hasten the signing of the peace pact. The theme of the convention was, first a permanent peace, then Americanization, with a slogan—"America for Americans." In fact hardly a speaker on any subject but somehow urged our further efforts to teach all foreigners principles of democracy and loyalty to our flag. It is surprising the number of schools and classes the club women have organized the past year to teach the foreigners in Oklahoma to speak and write the English language. Prizes were awarded for the greatest results in Americanization reported from Oklahoma.

"Dr. A. C. Scott of Oklahoma University delivered a masterly discourse on the League of Nations, and stated that while of the opposite political party to President Wilson, he desired to heartily endorse the League of Nations. He pointed to the good points in obtaining a lasting peace and the fallacy of the points claimed by objectors to the league. He stated and gave authority for his belief, that should the United States fail to enter the League of Nations that we will be plunged into war again and that at no distant date. The chairman of music, Mrs. Frost, urged every town to join a National Sing on Nov. 11, promptly at 11 A. M., to assemble and let our nation raise its voice in praise for the proclaiming of the armistice by singing our national anthems.

Much attention was given the report of our Educational Loan Fund for the purpose of helping deserving girls to a high school education. More than 60 girls have been given the helping hand. Our federation sent three young women to France last year, paying all expenses, to entertain and look after our boys. All three were at the convention and their report showed this money was well spent.

That club members are alive to every good work was demonstrated when an appeal was made to help the girls in the Industrial Home. The convention unanimously adopted a resolution to become Big Sisters to these girls—to write them encouraging letters, send them crochet cotton and other articles dear to the hearts of girls. There were too many good things in the three days for one to tell about at one time. But this, the largest organized body of women in Oklahoma, is a factor for good in this state. One thing should be mentioned—club women expect to make good use of the ballot; much needed legislation was suggested and discussed and some law makers who did not support suffrage for women may "see the handwriting on the wall" before the next election. Our members expressed themselves in favor of a non-partisan league for women of Oklahoma. The little city of Edmond demonstrated fully that a small place can entertain such a convention quite as well as a large place. In fact, we were never more royally entertained than at Edmond.

Our new president, Mrs. J. C. Pearson of Marshall, is a woman of broad experience in club work and the next two years bids fair to see much good accomplished and the Federation greatly enlarged."

Allen Hustler: One thing we've got to be thankful for next month and that is that we don't have to go through a presidential election.

During These Trying Years

—while your attention has been absorbed by world affairs, raw building materials have increased in cost by leaps and bounds.

LOOK AT THIS! 1915 1919

Framing lbr., (1,000 ft.)	$25.00	$60.00
Finished lbr., (1,000 ft.)	40.00	95.00
Lath (1000 ft.)	3.50	9.00
Nails (keg.)	2.00	6.50
Sand (cu. yd.)	1.50	2.25
Cement (bbl.)	2.60	3.40
Plaster (ton)	14.00	20.00
Paint (gal.)	2.25	4.25
Brick (1000)	7.50	17.00

But so have those identical materials increased in value which entered into the construction of your building which was erected previous to 1915, until now it is worth perhaps double what it originally cost—assuming that it has been kept in a high state of repair.

Had you thought of that? You WILL think of it when you undertake to rebuild AFTER A FIRE!

If you have not increased your insurance to correspond your personal loss will be proportionately greater.

Some owners think that this increased valuation is not insurable; IT IS.

Let's talk it over.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER
Illustrations by Master Galago

MASTER GALAGO.

One of the fairies had been sent by the fairy queen to find out about some of the animals and creatures in far off countries, so she could tell the fairy queen.

Then the fairy queen would whisper the stories to Daddy before he told Nick and Nancy his evening tale.

This was the story one of the little creatures told to the fairy who was on this trip for the fairy queen.

"Hello, who are you?" asked the fairy, as she saw a quite new kind of animal.

"I'm myself, who do you expect me to be?" asked the animal.

"Now, now," said the fairy, "don't let's joke."

"What will we do?" asked the animal. "Weep?"

"Of course not," said the fairy.

"What shall we do that is in between weeping and joking?" asked the animal.

"Let's talk," said the fairy.

"But I won't be able to understand you and you won't be able to understand me," said the animal. "I don't talk your language and you don't talk mine."

"We understand each other now, don't we?" asked the fairy.

"Yes, we seem to," said the animal.

"That is because a fairy can understand animals and birds and children
